Just A Thought
Feast of All Saints

A teacher once asked her pupils what a saint was and one of them, thinking of the stained glass windows in her own church, said that a saint was someone who lets the light in. Saints let the light of Christ's presence shine through their lives. Just as there are many colours in a stained-glass window, so the light of Christ can shine through people's lives in a whole variety of ways. Each of us reflects the light of the Lord's presence in a way that is unique.

There are people among us, who in a variety of ways allow the light of Christ's loving presence to shine through them. The light of the Lord is so rich that it needs to come into our world through a whole range of colours. No one of us on our own can do justice to the full light of Christ, but we can become the living-stained glass of the Lord's presence in the world.

We are all called to be saints.
People who let the Lord's light in.
The light of heaven.
